committee, whose efforts led to the formation of a company financed without outside assistance or the usual underwriting facilities.

CONFIDENT IN THEMSELVES.

That fact was attributable, not only to the promoters of the enterprise, but to the patriotism and enterprise of the good citizens of Dungarvan and locality.

It was an investment that showed not only their belief in the industrial future of this country, but also their confidence in the ability of their own townsmen to make good in industrial work.

He did not think they would have any reason at any time to regret the decision they had taken.

Not Built On Sentiment!

Continuing, Mr. Lemass, said that the success, such as it had been, of the plans to promote industrial development in this country had been such as to inspire them with confidence in the future.

That success would not have been possible had there not existed amongst their people a very deep-rooted feeling that much of what had been said and written about the industrial future of this country in the past was largely nonsense, inspired by those who had vested interests in maintaining the old position of industrial subservience.

The people, he thought, never believed that Irish industry should only be something built on sentiment, and something was bound to fail when sentiment proved inadequate to support it.

A NEW OUTLOOK.

When the opportunity was presented to develop the industrial potentialities of their country it was grasped by a very large number of people.

Many of them differed fundamentally in matters of political policy and in other directions, but they came together and worked together to make the most of the opportunities that were there and had created an entirely new outlook among the people in the matter of industrial development here.

THE ONLY CRITICISM.

If there was any tendency to speak critically on industrial development in this country at the moment it was, said Mr. Lemass, one which was inclined to give expression to a feeling of disappointment that progress had not been greater and that a large part of the industrial field, which was still untilled, had not yet been sown.

Very few people were disposed to think that the industrial progress that had been made would ever be reversed, or that the industrial enterprises set going would ever fail if adequately supported by their own people, and that support, in his opinion, was likely to be forthcoming in ever-increasing measure.

UNEMPLOYMENT, EMIGRATION : THE REMEDY

"In these days of economic stress," continued the Minister, "we are, all of us, naturally perturbed at the continued existence of unemployment and emigration, which, having stopped through temporary circumstances for a short period, has now resumed.

I am sure most thinking people realise that the problem of unemployment and emigration—they are both the same problem—cannot be removed, and all those social evils which they have given rise to cannot be terminated without the greatest degree of industrial development which circumstances will permit of."

There was, said Mr. Lemass, no substantial section of the people which did not appreciate the necessity and urgency of that industrial development, so that their people might be given not merely wider opportunities of employment but more diversified opportunities so that the individual likes or dislikes could be catered for.

GOODWILL NEEDED.

If they could succeed in securing the maximum amount of development of their natural resources that their geographical position and limited size of the home market would permit of, and secure at the same time that the needs of their people in housing and public utility works were adequately met, they could usefully occupy the labours of every unemployed man amongst them.

It would be a very serious matter for this country, he added, if the reverse of that were true, but nobody who had given thought to the position and had realised what could be done and what the unsatisfied needs of the people were would have any doubt about the matter.

These things could not be done in a short time and the speed with which they wished to achieve their objective would very largely depend upon the measure of goodwill there was; for, whatever programme was adopted, the more they could get the combined sections of the people working together towards an end in promoting the prosperity of the country and its economic development along some agreed line, the better it would be and the speedier would results come.

The Rev. T. M. Walsh, proposing the toast of the company, said that the tannery was a matter of nation-wide significance, and he congratulated Mr. Dickens and those who had been responsible for its establishment.

The young men who were given employment were, he said, engaged in a work which was good for the body and soul of the individual.

The best bulwark against Communism—or any other ism—was emplacement, for the men who were

Germs Hit Kidneys a Knockout Punch

At times the 9 million tiny tubes or cysts in the kidneys are attacked by germs, causing Urin Kidney, Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Headaches, Loss of Vigour, Dizz Pains, Rheumatism, Burning, Smiting and Itching. Ordinary medicines can't do much good because they don't kill the germs. But the doctor's prescription, Cystex, starts killing them in 2 hours, stops pain, relieves tiredness, and restores health. Cystex is guaranteed to set you right in 8 days or money back. Don't take chances with dangerous kidney germs. Ask your chemist for Cystex to-day. The guarantee protects you.

employed were the best guarantee of Faith and Fatherland.

Responding, Mr. Ryan, State Sol'r., said that in the opening of the factory, he had taken part in what was one of the greatest economic revolutions in the world.

Generation after generation of Irishmen had struggled and died, never to see what they had fought for: to-day the people had seen materialising the ideal for which they had fought—the economic and political independence of this country.

It was their duty to see that the work that had been accomplished so far was consolidated and that there should not be any going back.

They in Ireland had given an example to other countries, that they could deliver the goods.

Recalling that Dungarvan was one of the greatest fishing ports in Ireland, Mr. Ryan said that there were numerous young men who could find employment in the fishing industry and he hoped that something would be done.

FRIENDLY CO-OPERATION.
Mr. Reginald Dickens said he felt sure that the friendly co-operation extended there would continue.

He was grateful for the consideration which he had received from the Ministry of Industry and Commerce.

Proposing the toast of the guests, Dr. Michael Casey said that the opening of the factory was a work for the betterment of the people of the country and was a memorable event in the history of the Borough of Dungarvan.

Very Rev. Canon T. O'Brien, F.P., Dungarvan, said the happiest relations existed between the men employed and the management of the factory.

Mrs. Redmond, T.D., said she hoped that the new industry would be the forerunner of others to come in Dungarvan.

Mr. Little, T.D., Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Executive Council, also responded to the toast.

"REFUSE OF FILTHY MINDS"

PRIEST'S WARNING AGAINST INDECENT BOOKS

THE world to-day was littered with the refuse of poisoned, filthy minds—books that sought only to drag their readers to the level of the authors, said Rev. Father Celsus, C.P., preaching at St. Paul's Retreat, Mount Argus, Dublin, on the occasion of the annual May processions.

The church and grounds were thronged, and amplifiers conveyed the preacher's words to the vast throng outside the church.

Father Celsus said that the world to-day threw in their path the allurements of sinful pleasures and the filth of shameful sins. Wherever they turned the ugly head of the monster of filth and vice reared itself. Even at the amusements of their people—some shows and films—if not blatantly indecent, were at least suggestive.

The Press of to-day had thrown off the cloak of respectability and openly spoke of things that should not even be mentioned.

They would, Father Celsus added, be proving false to the blood that coursed in their veins; false to those who suffered and died for the Faith and for the love of Mary's Virtue if they allowed the pleasures of this world to turn them from the practice of purity.

Together with the clergy and hundreds of children, the following Confraternities took part in the processions: The Third Order of Our Lady; Mount Carmel; Most Precious Blood; North William Street; Grand Carmelites, Whitefriar Street; Immaculate Conception, Pro-Cathedral; Blessed Sacrament, St. John's; Holy Name, Rathmines; Immaculate Conception, St. Laurence O'Toole's; Evening Office, Exchange Street; Immaculate Conception, Haddington Road; Third Order of St. Francis, Church Street; Cross and Passion; Mount Argus; Christian Doctrine, Mount Argus; St. Clare's Orphans; Harold's Cross; Sacred Heart, Gardiner Street; Blessed Sacrament, Arran Quay; St. John's Purgatorial, Blackrock.

Each procession was given in the church by Rev. Father Gerald, C.P., assisted by Rev. Father Anglo, C.P., and Rev. Father Alphonsus, C.P.
